GLOBAL MANAGEMENT ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES (GMAP)

Globalization and technological advancement impose challenges on human resources and systems and require organizations to respond appropriately to risks and protect value that they created. The GMAP are developed to improve decision-making in the face of these challenges. The Principles were released as a result of research from across 20 countries in five continents. They provide a blueprint for effective analysis that can be universally applied in organizations large and small, public and private.

Objectives

- Understand the four outcomes of the GMAP: Influence, Relevance, Trust and Value effective analysis that can be universally.

- Understand how the GMAP are applied across 14 key activities, like external reporting, management and budgetary control, project management and risk management etc.

- Understand the core competencies required of management accounting professionals to help organizations to create, execute and refine their strategies.
